"break-ups" are silly. Consider the following as a loose framework for long term and meaningful solutions:

1. oversight committee (to oversee the following)
2. percentage of yearly gross of Microsoft to technology start-up fund.
To which technology related companies may apply to for grants.
3. cease and desist of any mergers or acquisitions
4. immediate re-negotiation of all OEM contracts (specifically to include multiple OS on boot-up)
5. open Windows source code to new open developer committee
(specifically to ensure security and compatability)
